technology

> Next-generation technology leadership.

The unprecedented dynamics of today's digital economy require executives who understand how to leverage technology for competitive advantage. With the #1-ranked Carnegie Mellon School of Computer Science as our academic and research partner, we immerse students in the business imperatives of technology and management.

Understanding how to competitively manage the seamless flow of information, ideas and decisions within an organization is the ultimate basis for success. Our MBA program links two organizational fundamentals – business and technology – in the Technology Leadership MBA Track. Students have the option to pursue a specialized Track that prepares them to lead and manage key corporate positions and initiatives in IT/IS today. The unparalleled resources of Carnegie Mellon's I.T. laboratories and research centers allow companies to benefit from current and emerging applications and trends that can increase the successful use of I.T. in organizations today.

"My internship project supported Microsoft's Business and Marketing Organization. I was part of a team overseeing the introduction of a year-long marketing plan, and part of my due diligence included qualitative research, including one-to-one interviews as a way to familiarize myself with this ecosystem."

"I've really enjoyed working with Tepper School students, both when they are learning from us, then later, once they are in business when we learn from them. Our students combine solid analytical training with a great understanding of the challenges of business that enables them to be successful in a wide range of endeavors."
